

I'm very concerned about the FCC making this ruling without public debate. The current Administration talks about bringing democracy overseas but here in the U.S. decisions that affect freedom of the airwaves are being made in virtual secrecy. It is important that the FCC release the actual language of the rule change and allow public debate on it--not just individual meetings with representatives of multimedia corporations--before voting on this matter. The more concentrated ownership of major media becomes, the fewer voices will be heard. Thank you for your consideration.
